Astore Harrison's bars and services are tailored to meet the clients needs in terms of design, ergonomics and operational efficiency allowing for maximum service and profitability.

The use of stainless steel components to the operational side of the bar means these items are easily cleaned, have an extended usable life span and are hygienic.

All of Astore Harrison's bars are built on modular stainless steel section integrated into the complete bar by 600mm, 500mm and 350mm modules with seamless stainless steel underservery surface to the operational side. A no-bolt policy gives ultimate flexibility and adjustability.

Utilising traditional or modern materials Astore Harrison provide high quality finishes that combine practicality and durability whilst being aesthetically correct which puts Astore Harrison at the forefront of cutting edge bars and interior design.

Astore Harrison have applied the successful principles of their modular bar to mobile bars. Providing an efficient, often permanent looking bar suitable for temporary function, giving a flexibility with a professional aesthetic appeal.

Be it a new bar or a complete interior, Astore Harrison work with client or client consultants to produce ambience and atmosphere to create bars and venues that maximise profits and encourage returning clients.

Good visual design needs to be coupled with technical knowledge to deliver the client service expected by your discerning customers. Astore Harrison aim to deliver their aspects within their in-house team.

flexible > efficient > durable > hygienic

Astore Harrison's modular bar has been devised to be a complete system. At its heart is the stainless steel carcass, refined to meet the stringent public health regulations and to become an integral part of the finishes, supporting bar tops and front panels. The stainless steel carcass gives maximum flexibility enabling glasses and equipment such as glass washers, ice makers, coolers to be located efficiently.

Access to the services void is made easy by the use of removable front panels, a standard feature. Once the panels are removed the exposed services are revealed outside of the operational aspect of the bar, enabling maintenance and installation of more services to be undertaken without any interruption of the operational side of the bar.
